Proud to be American

By Elizabeth Miller

What do we have to be thankful for? Stop! We can salute our flag, sing the Star Spangled Banner, and sing God Bless America. Observe and thank our veterans of all wars on Veterans Day. We have freedom of speech and religion. Observe Thanksgiving – give thanks to pilgrims who came on Mayflower who landed on Plymouth Rock. Pray for our food, shelter and families. Proud to be American from Land of America the Beautiful.

The following poem was written by Harley Hamilton in 1944 or 1945 and was printed at that time in the Gazette. Harley was on the invasion at Iwo Jima.

*When this war is over and we once cross the sea
There's a little town in Iowa that's home sweet home to me
And a church with a shining dome
And a mother who is waiting to welcome me back home.
Give me the sound of the rooster crow
Or the cheery song of the wren
Instead of the bullets' viscious whine
Or the crying of dying men
I want to go home to that home someday
Someday when the world is free
When the tired sons go home to rest
It's Iowa for me!*

A Special Thank You to all of our area Veterans

Shellbark Club celebrates 100 Years

By Mary Masonholder Wilson

"Happy Birthday to Shellbark" was sung by the guests at the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the formation of Shellbark Club, as Majorie Massey and Shirley Finke blew out the candles on the cake. On November 3rd, members of the Shellbark Club, anyone who had gone to Shellbark School, or those who had lived (or were relatives of those) in the Shellbark neighborhood gathered at the home of Mary Wilson to celebrate this occasion.

The Shellbark Club was originally started in 1911 by a group of women who wanted to get together and visit while they did their mending and embroidery work. These women were located in the neighborhood of the Shellbark School (which is still standing), southwest of Columbus City. Originally the club was named the Shellbark Embroidery Club.

Memorabilia and pictures were brought to the recent celebration and everyone reminisced, as they looked at them and talked about who was related to whom in the pictures. There were original books on display that had been used in the Shellbark School. There were pictures of the school and people, which were now over a hundred years old. One picture was of the 1898 flag raising ceremony outside the school. Mary Holmes, who currently is at the Colonial Manor Nursing Home, was a teacher at Shellbark School, and she still had her teaching contracts and other documents that were also on display. The 1937 contract for "salary and janitorial fees commencing August 30th" was for $57.50. The minutes of the club for the last several years were there for people to read and see what their parents, grandparents, and so on had done.

Mary Wilson had a surprise for the group. Her grandmother, the late Mrs. James D. (Anna) Helmick, who was a member of the Shellbark Club, had been sick in 1933. The members decided to make her a quilt to cheer her up, and they made what is called a signature quilt. Each member wrote her name on a quilt block and then embroidered it. Once again, guests found the names of many of their ancestors. The names on the quilt were Grace Williams, Eva Fullerton, Mary Williams, Dorothy Boyd, Helen Morgan, Nellie Marsden, Rosina Hawkins, Jennie Kerr, Jennie Gipple, Henrietta Wilson, Corrine Peters, Mildred Lewis, J.G. Ruth Gabriel, Catherine Wilson, Velma Cutkomp, Jennie Hanft, Julia Peters, Martha Heitmeier, Grace Hughes, Margaret Davis, Alice Prior, Veda Gipple, Mary Burge, Edith Pierce, Mae Fortune, Ella Baker, Sibyl Lewis, Grace M., Alice Pierce, Mae Hedger, Marie Rutt, and Mother (Sarah Barnes). Wilson received this quilt from her mother, Jeannette Masonholder, who was Anna Helmick's daughter. It is interesting that Mary married Dan Wilson whose family was also from the Shellbark neighborhood and several of the names on the quilt are of his family, thus joining two Shellbark families.

Most of the celebration afternoon was spent in visiting; however there was a short program. Janet Gipple, president of the club, read the beginning history. Mary Wilson read some of the events and projects of the club over the years and also read a poem "Dedicated to the Women of the Shellbark Embroidery Club" written by her great-great grandfather, James K. Helmick.

Other guests told of Shellbark memories. Mrs. Dick (Anna) Fullerton of New London brought a recipe often served at the Shellbark Club meetings, which consisted of cream cheese, pickles, pimento, etc. It cost then only pennies to make. Anna had purchased all the ingredients, labeled the prices, and showed how much more expensive it would be to make it today. She also said she had made it with plans to bring some to the celebration; however, she said, "It was not good!" and she decided against her plan. She also told humorous stories about how she knew pressed chicken was often served at gatherings, so she went to the cleaners to buy "pressed chicken", and they said they did not "know that chicken wrinkled", and they didn't have any! Mary Wilson knew from her mother who had gone to Shellbark, that when Henrietta Howell was the school teacher, red jello was always served on Valentine's Day, and the students were really excited about it and couldn't wait. Games such as kittenball were played at recess or a favorite activity was sliding down the hills in the winter. The outhouse always had a Sears catalog for toilet paper, and Jeannette had told Mary, "We were usually to the harness by Christmas time."

Larry Prior told of farmers in the neighborhood who worked together, often sharing one combine. They then went from farm to farm, harvesting each other's crops. Also some guests remembered going to Shellbark School after its closing when the club meetings were still held in the school. Often the children would write on the old blackboards while their parents and grandparents talked, ate, and drank coffee.

At the conclusion of the program, questions were asked. It was found that Marjorie Fullerton, now of Washington, formerly from Columbus Junction, was the oldest person there at age 96. The youngest was William Lewis McWhirter, who was five weeks old. His mother, Katie Marjorie Fullerton and William McWhirter, the oldest and youngest Shellbark Club members present.

McWhirter; grandfather, Don Lewis; and aunt, Rae Lee Lewis Whaack were also there. There were two people present who had attended Shellbark School and they were Larry Prior of CJ and Carol Coon of Washington.

The original members of the Shellbark Club would be happy to see that their little embroidery group is still going strong after 100 years. It is easy to say, "a good time was had by all" at this centennial celebration.
